“Marc’s self-discipline allowed him to maintain, more than most, that delicate distinction between what he thought the law should be and what it was revealed to be after a rigorous and full analysis using accepted judicial methodology.”

To Ensure that Justice is Done: Essays in Memory of Marc Rosenberg

Editors: Benjamin L. Berger, Emma Cunliffe, and James Stribopoulos

With the passing of Justice Marc Rosenberg in 2015, Canada lost one of its finest judges and most influential legal minds.

To Ensure that Justice is Done is both a tribute to a brilliant career and an indispensable resource for all those concerned with the ways in which we seek justice in and through the law.

Inspired by Justice Rosenberg’s legacy, this unique work brings together leading practitioners, academics and judges for a probing exploration of the key issues and central themes facing the administration of justice in Canada today.

This volume surveys the areas of criminal law, evidence, and public law, including wrongful convictions, social justice and the criminal law, the role of the judge and lawyer, challenges facing the law of evidence, the past and future of Charter justice, and the function of legal education in contributing to the administration of justice in Canada and abroad.

This work is organized into four major sections, reflecting key areas of Justice Rosenberg’s contributions as a leading defence lawyer, consummate judicial educator, and a distinguished judge.
